

A GREAT SUCCESS FOR HELEN KELLER

Speech at World's Fair Favorably Received.

BLIND GIRL MADE A HIT

How She Learned to Talk—Insisted on Learning When She Was Ten Years Old.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 20.—Dr. Gallaudet, principal of Gallaudet College for the Blind, at Washington, gives an interesting account of the way in which Helen Keller, the blind girl who was the feature of the fair on Tuesday, had been taught to know the names of things.

Miss Sullivan began Helen's education when her pupil was only seven years of age. Miss Sarah Fuller taught the child to speak. Miss Fuller tells of her work in the following letter:

"The first intimation I had of Helen Keller's desire to speak was on the 28th of March, 1890, when her teacher, Miss Sullivan, called upon me with her, and asked me to help her teach Helen to speak; she said: 'Helen has spelled upon her fingers, "I must speak."'

Ten Years Old.

She was nearly ten years old when the lessons began, and Miss Fuller told in the most interesting way the manner in which she began to familiarize her with the different parts of her mouth, beginning the articulations with the vowel sounds, her first spoken words being "mamma" and "papa."

Miss Keller's address at the Fair on Helen Keller Day has excited much attention and favorable comment. What she said is here repeated:

"I have been asked to lend my voice to what is being done in the world for the uplifting of those who struggle in unequal and untoward circumstances. All these great halls of machinery, power and art are the achievement of the strength of man when his arm is firm and his spirit unbound. In the midst of so much mighty achievement the presence of our congenious here demonstrates that on his triumphant way man has not forgotten his weak brother."

"The many thousand people who have been invited to come to the fair have been asked because of learning, skill, or contribution to the wealth of the world. I come not for aught that I have done, but what has been done for me to raise me to the level of those who see and hear."

"I testify to what the good and strong have done for deprivation and infirmity. I bring my evidence that able men and women are doing their best to untie the ears of the deaf, open the eyes of the blind, put speech on dumb lips, bring light and intelligence to darkened minds."

"I enter with you into the communion of living speech, and in the joy of speech express my heartfelt gratitude that the impediment of dumbness has been removed from my tongue. Such is my brief, but earnest, message to those who have asked us to come here and those who sit before us."

"The message of this exposition is to work for the education of all people, including the sightless, the deaf, and the dumb.

"Within the great halls stand not only model factories and works of art. Yonder stands the locomotive annihilating distance, and the illustration of the processes of irrigation, which has reclaimed the desert, and in the halls of education we see how man has reclaimed his fellow-men and annihilated darkness. The Louisiana Purchase is a great manifestation of all the forces of enlightenment and all man's thousand torches burn here at once. The value of everything here is educational."

"We think no country since Eden has been so good to live in as ours. No nation, however, is as great as the sum of the achievements of all nations. All that is gathered here symbolizes the will of the American people that there shall be an open way of education to all, no matter how poor their circumstances or how limited their capacities."

"The service of man to man shines all the brighter. They appeal to the instincts to help, more deeply and firmly implanted in our civilization than in any other age. All that these great halls contain tell us that the world is on our side. The forces here displayed lift up my hands and support my weak feet. Science, nature, and art say unto me, thou art deaf and blind, but enter thou into the kingdom of God. God bless the nation that provides education for all her children."
